Legends Of American Dance And Choreography (Collective Biographies)

Synopsis

"Nobody is born a dancer," said Mikhail Baryshnikov. "You have to want it more than anything." The ten dancers and choreographers in this collection shaped their raw talent with passion and intensity. All have made unparalleled contributions to the world of dance, and their stories present an overview of dance in America. Author Carin T. Ford's lively text and delightful anecdotes introduce middle grade and young adult readers to ten greats in American dance -- from ballet to modern dance to Broadway and more.

Grade 6-10-Brief, fact-filled biographies of Martha Graham, Fred Astaire, George Balanchine, Agnes de Mille, Katherine Dunham, Jerome Robbins, Bob Fosse, Alvin Ailey, Twyla Tharp, and Mikhail Baryshnikov. These individuals present a rich portrait of the vitality and the diversity of dance in America throughout the 20th century. The concise, engaging text captures their early years, key moments that led them to dance, as well as their disappointments and triumphs. There are two clear, well-chosen black-and-white photographs of each artist. This collective biography may whet the appetite of young readers and encourage them to seek longer accounts of these luminaries of the dance world.
