After several years of working in the public and private sector, doing everything from assembling Tonka Toy trucks (when they were made in America), working in an LP record distribution warehouse, serving in a variety of public governmental roles, managing a construction office, to becoming a social studies teacher at the age of forty-two, Rhonda is recently retired. Her passion for history, especially local and regional history, has resulted in the Minnesota's Lost Towns series which chronicles Minnesota used-to-be towns and communities. Interesting reading for those who enjoy learning about ghost towns--this was gift and very appreciated.

Great

Very interesting.

It only gets four stars because I being a life long resident of southern Minnesota born and raised Redwood cty. She left out several lost town's in the Redwood cty chapter and a couple of lost town's in Murray cty. In Redwood she left out the following towns, New Avon, the Village of Sundown, the Village of Cottonwood crossing which had a turn table for the trains, also Rowena which now is a elevator and one private residence but at one time the railroad went through it on its way to Wabbasso. Also she states that Morgan is a lost town I'm not sure how it can be lost when 879 people live there. In Murray cty she leaves out Kelly which according to the book is a class A ghost town...meaning nothing there. All of the for mentioned town's are class A with the exception of Rowena. Good read otherwise.....

I was surprised that this book has many pages and pictures with this low cost. The author had collected all information and let us to enjoy towns that had "disappeared".

The stories weren't what I had hope for. A little more history would have been nice.

The book was very interesting

Great item Thanks
